Last night Mr. Serns lectured on the necessity of a bodily resurrection. He said, in part, "The hope of the Christian Church, the hope of every widow and orphan child is the resurrection. The popular belief in inherent immortality has wrought much mischief in the world, especially in China and India. They are millenniums to the superstitious and reverent regard for the dead, the habitat of the soul, have made foreign mission fields out of the seen nations."

Vesterday proved to be one of the hottest days Richmond has experienced this summer. The thermometer reached a high mark of 90 in the shade, and the instrument in the sun registered higher still.

Men and animals suffered from the intense heat. Even the parks and open places were hot. Capitol Square, in which usually people gather of an afternoon to cool themselves, was partly forsaken. Gamble's Hill Park was a more favored place, for here the breeze swings up from the river. In the densely populated neighborhoods of the poorer sections there was discomfort approaching suffering. There was need of coolness for the little ones, for it is they who suffer most in such a season as Richmond is now experiencing.

Boxes for the lee Mission Fund have been placed in every confectionery and soda fountain store, so that those who seek a cooling drink may not forget the babies suffering for a bit of ice.
